

VERNATONE™, VERNALIFT™ and MARLIN EXHAUST MUFFLERS

Centek's Vernatone™, Vernalift™, and Marlin series exhaust mufflers are designed for long-lasting and maintenance-free operation. The high-temperature fiberglass is impervious to the effects of salt water and hydrocarbon emissions, so there is no recommended replacement schedule whatsoever.

No cleaning of the units is required, inside or out. Soot buildup on the inside of the units naturally flushes through during engine operation. Should the outside of the units wish to be cleaned, the painted finish may be susceptible to damage from strong solvents, but the corrosion-resistant fiberglass is not.

All Centek mufflers that are not self-draining are equipped with a stainless steel drain plug. This drain plug is for removing water from the muffler for winterizing. If you don't know if your muffler is self-draining, simply see if there is a stainless steel drain plug near the bottom of the unit.

If the engine experiences an over-temperature condition, a backfire, or if there is a loss of cooling water flow, the muffler should be inspected for damage. If, during engine operation, there are any leaks, either water or exhaust fumes, the muffler must be replaced. If the muffler is seriously discolored, it experienced an over-temperature condition and should be replaced.
